CHCC: Almost half of CHC's nurses capped out by 2018

REPORTER

The Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. is starting at a potential crisis when the CW1 visas of 47 percent of its nursing workforce expire by 2018. That means that, among nurses alone, 85 of about 180 are expected to exit the CNMI.

IGIA raises health, fiscal concerns with WH

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Justin R. Clark, Deputy Assistant to the President for Intergovernmental Affairs; Senior White House adviser Douglas

W. Domenech, and acting assistant secretary of the Interior for Insular Areas Nikolao I. Pula Jr. met last week with Guam Gov. Eddie Calvo, U.S.

CHCC chief executive officer Esther Muña said a total of 114 CW1 workers from various areas of the Commonwealth Health Center, Tinian Health Center, and the Rota Health Center will be "potentially capped out" in November and December of 2017.

The CNMI is only allowed a total of 12,998 CW1 slots this fiscal year.

Being "capped out" means there would no longer be any slots for these nurses, which means they will have to leave the CNMI.

Territories' healthcare face challenges

Access, financing, and labor are just a few of the major healthcare challenges the U.S. territories face—challenges that force patients, like in the CNMI, to seek medical attention in other countries, thereby increasing costs.

This was the message that Matthew Deleon Guerrero conveyed during the Senior Plenary Session of the Interagency Group on Insular Areas last Friday at the U.S.

IPI, as advised by CCC, requests for extension, sustaining growth

The casino license agreement requires Imperial Pacific International (CNMI), LLC to build the initial gaming facility in Garapan and begin operations by Aug. 11, 2017. Imperial Pacific faced and overcame a great variety of challenges that caused construction delays, most especially severe damage to construction equipment from Typhoon Soudelor that took several months to repair.

Other challenges that further delayed Imperial Pacific's construction site also included adverse weather conditions, making the tower cranes inoperable; unstable soil conditions that caused damage to piling that were driven into the ground; lack of readily available skilled laborers; an overabundance of water at the construction site, delaying the pouring of the concrete foundation; lack of necessary construction materials; and the eight months to execute the public lands lease for Garapan.

To further complicate matters, the expiration of the Mariana Resort & Spa's public land lease expires in April 2018 and the deadline to complete the integrated resort in Marpi is February 2018.

Imperial Pacific has worked closely with the various regulatory government agencies in ensuring compliance with federal and local laws and regulations and the conditions in the various permits needed to construct the initial gaming facility. Imperial Pacific appreciates the guidance and regulatory oversight of these agencies as well as the Commonwealth Casino Commission, most especially vice chair Joseph Reyes' most recent suggestion to extend the temporary casino lease to allow more time to complete construction of the initial gaming facility.

After consultation with regulatory agencies and its subcontractors, Imperial Pacific submitted a request to the Office of the Governor for a six-month extension to operate the temporary casino and an extension to complete construction of the initial gaming facility and integrated resort. The company considers it prudent to make the request for the extension but has not changed its plan to do what it can to enable opening of the casino part of the resort hotel at the earliest date possible.

Imperial Pacific will continue to work with its subcontractors and all government agencies to bring its grand development to the CNMI community at the earliest possible opportunity. (PR)

2 CUC projects are awarded $5M federal grant

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Two Commonwealth Utilities Corp. projects—Tank 103 and the Rota Waste Management Project—have obtained a $5-million grant from the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Special assistant attorney general Teresita Sablan said the $5 million was awarded last Thursday. She said she would receive last Friday any update from the Office of Insular Affairs.

Sablan disclosed this new funding when she appeared on behalf of the CNMI government at a hearing last Wednesday in federal court.

U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge David O. Carter said he would speak with Sablan on Saturday, Feb. 25, about this update, along with CUC counsel James Sirok.

The U.S. government did not object.

Tank 103 is a storage tank for fuel at CUC's power plants 1 and 2 in Lower Base. It was shut down due to leaks. Its cleanup and inspection were completed in 2016, but repairs have been deferred for this year.

The Engineering and Environmental Management Company had recommended to the court that capital improvement projects for fiscal year 2017 include Rota facility waste management improvements, Tank 103 repairs and some secondary work, Power Plants 1 and 2 on Saipan, and EEMC construction management.

Carter recently granted a joint request by CUC and other parties to extend the deadline for the CNMI government to file with the court its notice of authorization to proceed for the $5 million funding for some CUC projects.

Carter allowed the CNMI government to file its notice of authorization to proceed for the $5 million funding for stipulated order 2 on or before March 1, 2017.

Pursuant to the court's order, the CNMI must deposit $5 million into the court's registry or file a notice with the court of the U.S. Department of the Interior's authorization to proceed (ATP) for funding stipulated order 2 projects by Feb. 1, 2017.

The request for extension of deadline was jointly filed by Sirok, U.S. Department of Justice environmental enforcement section senior attorney Bradley R. O'Brien, and Sablan.

The lawyers stated that the U.S., including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Engineering and Environmental Management Company, have been working to obtain an ATP to devote $5 million to stipulated order 2 projects.

However, the lawyers said, it has become apparent that despite all efforts of the parties and the EEMC, an ATP will not be issued on or before Feb. 1, 2017.

They said the delay in the ATP is due to the fact that the Office of Insular Affairs is currently on continuing resolution through April 28, 2017, and issues surrounding the approval and completion of the CNMI's single audit.

Salvosa is 2017 Miss Teen Pusong Pinoy

Chloe Hazel Anne Salvosa was crowned Miss Teen Pusong Pinoy last Saturday, Feb. 25, 2016, at Royal Taga Hall of Saipan World Resort, beating out 11 other candidates to take home the tiara.

"I thank God for this blessing, this second chance that He gave me. I thank the people that supported me in this pageant," said Salvosa.

Salvosa, who is a junior at Marianas High School, said that her advocacy as Miss Teen Pusong Pinoy is educating the youth about being environment friendly.

Salvosa took home $800 and a free six-month scholarship from Saipan Music and Dance Studio. She also won the Spirit Award and Best in Evening Gown trophy.

First runner-up Jenalyn Tinio took home $500 and the Best in Talent award.

Second runner-up Samantha Francisco took home $300 and two special awards:

Miss Congeniality and Miss Photogenic.

The runners-up will also have six-month scholarship from Saipan Music and Dance Studio.

Crystal Fiona Manipon took home the Miss Charity trophy for her help with fundraising, and Katrina Guevarra took home the Star of the Night award.

"Pusong Pinoy means wanting to help people, to care for people, and to share. Pusong Pinoy is a Filipino attribute of always looking to make things better for the good of the family/community" said United Filipino Organization president Marlon Regaton.

SueAnn Huevos, Kristen Joy Razon, Stephanie Lagunero, Angela Banez, Nina Ritz Manzon, Christine Anne

Noble, Grace Anne Vendiola, and Erika Lansang were the other contestants.

The panel of judges were Miss Teen CNMI 2001 Gina Duenas, Miss Teen CNMI 2004 Divana Manglona Dela Cruz, Miss Marianas Teen 2016 Palanga Blas Taimanao, Stellar Marianas national director Ping Deleon Guerrero, and MHS principal Cherlyn Cabrera. (Mackenzie Perez)

IGIA

sion of the Interagency Group on Insular Areas. Hosted at the Department of the Interior, the annual conference discussed health and financial concerns for the territories. Gov. Ralph DLG Torres, who was hosting a congressional delegation in the CNMI, was represented at the meeting by his chief of staff, Matt Deleon Guerrero.

Clark spoke about his growing interest in the U.S. territories and his role as the principal point of contact for the governors in the Trump administration.

Domenech reminded attendees that, having served as Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Insular Areas from January 2008 to January 2009, he was not a stranger to the territories and referred to the many briefings that the Office of Insular Affairs has already provided him on the various challenges and opportunities that the territories are encountering.

In his remarks, Pula asked all attendees to remember a major political leader of the Pacific who often participated at IGIA plenary sessions, Eni Hunkin Faleomavaega of American Samoa, who died on Feb.22. Faleomavaega served in the U.S. House of Representatives for 26 years, and Pula declared that American Samoa, the Pacific in general, and the peoples throughout the U.S. territories have lost a champion.

Calvo focused his comments on the challenges that well-intentioned but misaligned federal policies and regulations impose on the territories' ability to foster economic development and fiscal sustainability. He said immigration, environmental, and tax policies in the territories should be guided by the unique circumstances of the territories and not by the norms of the continental United States.

Mapp addressed the great need for increased federal infrastructure investment in the territories. He noted that the population-based formulas that determine the allocation of federal infrastructure investment severely handicap the territories' abilities to develop sustainable economic development and achieve greater financial self-sufficiency. He also called for greater attention on the open borders of the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, and the need for greater investment in securing the territories against potential threats.

CHCC

An immediate solution would be to pay extra overtime for the remaining nurses, which would not only be a financial blow to CHCC, but also be extremely taxing to the nurses themselves, said Muña.

"We are worried," said Muña. "How do we make sure that [CHCC] has enough nurses for the patients? How can we expand our hospital if we do not have the workforce?"

Muña said that CHC's perennial workforce problem could be solved by providing a competitive salary to entice nurses, both local and from the U.S. mainland, and encourage more to pursue a nursing career.

Muña concedes that local nurses do finish a nursing course at the Northern Marianas College but opt not to push through in becoming a registered nurse, RN.

"You produce enough graduate nurses but the problem is, they don't become nurses. The percentage of how many people pass the National Council Licensure Examination, or NCLEX, is small," said Muña.

"We want to provide more incentive for people to take the exam, to pass the exam, and to actually become a nurse. We know that the rate of RNs being produced out of the graduate nurses is small. How do we address that? We have to look at competition," said Muña.

Muña said that recruiting from the U.S. mainland is also tricky due to the islands' less competitive salary.

"Even if we recruit in the U.S., nobody wants to come because of the salary. We have nurses who have graduated here in the CNMI who are locals, but go to the mainland because the salary is not that competitive [here]," said Muña.

The third problem, according to Muña, is that other industries that also utilize CW workers are competing with CHCC for CW slots.

Muña believes making salaries competitive would benefit CNMI healthcare in general.

"[With a competitive salary], the nurses you are trying to recruit is convinced to come here and the nurses that you are getting out of the college is enticed to pursue and pass the NCLEX to come and work for CHCC as a nurses," she said.

In California, RNs make as much as $100,000 per annum, while $40,000 to $50,000 is the average for Guam. On Saipan, RNs earn about $20,000 to $30,000 only.

Long-term solutions may include an employment-based visa, but that itself comes with its own set of problems.

"We are talking about removing and getting away from the CW, [switching to] an employer-based visa. One of the concerns that people have is [retention]," said Muña.

"Nobody can be deprived of their right to choose, so you can't demand that they stay here. You can demand a payback in the contract, but how do you make them stay?"

By providing a competitive salary, along with an employment-based visa, Muña believes majority of the nursing workforce would be retained.

According to Muña, nine employees would be going home in April due to the expiry of their CW1 visa.

Muña reminded that it is a Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services, or CMS, requirement that there should be at least one RN on duty at all times for each health center.

"We will not remove that," said Muña, referring to both CMS compliance and the placement of at least one RN in the hospital at any given time.

CMS is an invaluable source of funding for CHCC.

"You can't practice healthcare with uncertainty," said Muña.

TERRITORIES

Department of the Interior in Washington, D.C.

Deleon Guerrero is the chief of staff of Gov. Ralph DLG Torres. He represented Torres in the meeting since the CNMI governor was still on Saipan, hosting the visiting U.S. congressional delegation headed by Rep. Rob Bishop (R-Utah), last week.

The delegation visited Saipan at the invitation of Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (D-MP) and learn firsthand the immigration and workforce issues that affect the CNMI. They also visited Tinian to look into the U.S. military's planned activities and Rota for the National Park Services study.

Deleon Guerrero said that 36 percent of the CNMI's population was either under the Child Health Insurance Program or Medicaid in 2015. "[But] according to the most recent data available, 46 percent of the population is without any type of health insurance coverage while 51 percent live on income at or below the federal poverty line."

"With a greater percentage of individuals and families living beneath the poverty line than the national average, limited financial resources hinder us from providing quality and affordable health care. As a result, many [of our] residents are forced to seek the care they need off-island, at a greater cost."

He added that the CNMI's Medicaid program is the main source of health coverage that a third of residents avail of. "The CNMI's program essentially acts as a block grant... which is statutorily set at a low Federal Medical Assistance Percentage of 55 percent."

"The CNMI would be eligible for a percentage far beyond the current arbitrary percentage if FMAP were to be calculated in the same manner as it is for the states. Calculating FMAP based on need would recognize, and better provide for, our large low-income population and provide greater coverage to the many citizens born and raised on U.S. soil in the CNMI who cannot afford to pay for health insurance."

He said the federal cap on Medicaid dollars is also a burden in getting efficient health services. "The constrained budget limits the [CNMI] Medicaid's office to better explore opportunities to innovate the delivery of services to increase efficiency, lower expenditures, and improve patient outcomes. These concerns are not new to the federal government, nor are they unreasonable."

The Bipartisan Congressional Task Force on Economic Growth, which oversaw Puerto Rico's debt crisis, stated in their December 2016 report that territories should also be treated in a more equitable and sustainable manner under the Medicaid program.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, acting Interior Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Nikolai I. Pula Jr., Deputy Assistant to the President for Intergovernmental Affairs Justin R. Clark, Senior White House adviser Douglas W. Domenech, Govs. Lolo Moliga (American Samoa), Eddie Calvo (Guam), and Kenneth Mapp (U.S. Virgin Islands), and representatives from the departments of Health and Human Services and Treasury were also at the meeting.

BOE

Thursday, the Board of Education said that several investors have approached the board in hopes of acquiring the property. The Public School System owns the land where GES is located.

The board declined to identify the investors.

BOE board chair Marylou Ada said that several investors have approached BOE to ask if it is interested in letting go of the property.

The offers have been attractive enough such that the BOE is seriously considering the matter but the question is, what would happen to the school?

To resolve the issue, the BOE has directed Education Commissioner Cynthia Deleon Guerrero to come up with guidelines to be followed should investors be interested in other schools as well.

"It is very congested down there already," said Ada referring to the immediate surrounding of GES.

Ada added that GES is practically the middle point of Garapan, where most students reside.

"In return for disposing of our property, what do we want from our investors? Who is going to be responsible for designating the land to where the relocation would be? We have to also keep the parents in the loop [in regards to] where the relocation would be located," she said. "We want the parents in the community to be involved."

Ada said that transportation remains key to GES' location, which could be affected if the school relocates.

BOE also sees this opportunity as a way of upgrading GES into a state-of-the-art facility.

"Do we want them to build a state-of-the-art facility, complete with a baseball field, an auditorium, etc.? We want to have a say on how we want our schools to be designed and built according to our needs and the demographic of our students," she said.

According to Deleon Guerrero, BOE wants to see the feasibility of letting go of the property, including the best recommendation from the management based on the current economic situation and the current environment of GES.

"Many businesses are coming up around us, so we want to be ready and prepared. Although the school campus is enclosed, the students and their learning would be impacted by their immediate surroundings. The board wants me to look at that and prepare the recommendation and the guidelines for the board to consider," said Deleon Guerrero. According to Deleon Guerrero, there are at least five investors interested in the property.

Deleon Guerrero did assure, however, that if an offer is presented to BOE and BOE accepts, it would automatically include plans for a new school.

"The focus here is not just on the environmental impact, but the impact on student learning. What are the environmental concerns, what are some of the things that are going around the school that could possibly affect what is going on in the school campus. We need to be very mindful and cautious of that," she said.

More work on WWII Heritage Trail on Saipan, Tinian

Ships of Exploration and Discovery Research, Inc. and East Carolina University's maritime studies program are headed back to Saipan and Tinian on their fourth grant from the National Park Service American Battlefield Protection Program Grant.

Awarded in 2016, the $64,600 grant runs two years and hopes to "expand the regional understanding of the World War II "Operation Forager" in the Mariana Islands and monitor the Saipan Underwater Maritime Heritage Trail."

The WWII Maritime Heritage Trail, created in 2010 from ABPP grant funding, consists of 12 submerged and semi-submerged archaeological sites including four aircraft wrecks, two shipwrecks, three tanks, two landing craft, and one Amtrak. It is open to swimmers, snorkelers and divers of all ages and backgrounds. Nine waterproof guides (in English and Japanese) including a site map and historical information can be taken underwater and used to tour around the sites. Additionally, four posters that include images of the wrecks and more in-depth information are available for download online.

The 2016-2018 project continues to conduct research on the trail sites and will collect a second set of corrosion data to assess deterioration of the sites as well as short and long term impacts to the sites such as climate change. The team will also conduct photogrammetric surveys of the sites to create 3D models for interpretation and future management. The combination of these two surveys makes for a robust set of longitudinal data that can be used by local managers.

After working on Saipan, the team will head to Tinian where they will, for the first time, survey the invasion beaches of the Battle for Tinian. Any data and heritage sites will be recorded and used to develop a military terrain analysis of the battlefield that can be used by archaeologists, historians, and managers to understand the battle and protect it into the future.

Public meetings and a robust media presence is planned to involve the community and communicate the project and results. Local partners who have worked with ships in the past include Historic Preservation Office, National Parks Service, Northern Marianas Housing Corp., Coastal Resources Management, and Division of Environmental Quality. The team plans to work with local partners and community members and brings researchers from as far as Australia (Western Australian Museum, Heritage Victoria), Japan (A.P.P.A.R.A.T.U.S. LLC) and the U.S. (Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, SEARCH, Inc.). # Expert testimony on Carolinian marriages opposed by the OAG

ferdie\_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Office of the Attorney General wants the Superior Court to prevent Remedio Elameto and her common-law husband Pedro Pua from presenting any expert testimony concerning Carolinian customary marriages.

If not, Elameto and Pua should disclose the identity of any witness it intends to produce at the evidentiary hearing, according to OAG Civil Division chief Christopher Timmons Elameto’s and Pua’s lawyer, Claire Kelleher-Smith, said the the best source of information about Carolinian custom are members of the Carolinian community, who have personal knowledge of customary practices.

They claim that the government’s argument—that the testimony of experts in the Carolinian custom “has no probative value,” “would ultimately constitute a waste of time” “would unnecessarily confuse the issues before the court” and “would involve unfair prejudice”—is wholly without merit.

Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho ordered Friday that the presentation of testimony on the issue of Carolinian customary marriage will start tomorrow, Tuesday, at 9am. Camacho will hear today, Monday, at 9am argument any preliminary issues related to the evidentiary hearing.

Elameto and Pua are suing the CNMI government and two former Commonwealth Health Center doctors Rajee Iyer and Gary Ramsey for medical malpractice, bad faith, and emotional distress and loss of consortium.

Elameto claimed that a surgical team at CHC left a 15-centimeter long surgical clamp in her abdomen during a surgery to address her irregular periods and ovarian cysts in August 2000.

Elameto disclosed that it was almost 14 years later—in June 2014—when the surgical clamp was discovered and removed at Guam Memorial Hospital.

Timmons is counsel for the CNMI government and co-defendants. He discussed Carolinian marriages in the government’s opposition to Elameto and Pua’s brief pertaining to the legal validity of Carolinian customary marriage.

Elameto and Pua have asked the court to allow them to present expert witnesses on Carolinian customary marriage.

Timmons said that should include a certification whether the witness intends to produce expert testimony under the Rules of Civil Procedure, the subject matter on which the witness is expected to testify, and a summary of the facts and opinions to which the witness is expected to testify.

Timmons said the court cannot look to evidence beyond the pleadings without converting the Rule 12 motion to dismiss filed by the government into a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment.

He said Elameto and Pua did not plead a theory of Carolinian customary marriage in their complaint, so it would be improper to hear evidence on this unasserted theory.

Timmons said plaintiffs have refused to identify the experts they intend to call at the hearing and no discovery has been conducted in this case.

He said the upcoming hearing is akin to an oral presentation of a legal treatise, and will provide the court with the information necessary to clearly articulate the legal rules concerning Carolinian customary marriage.

Kelleher-Smith said there is no “unfair surprise” as the government knows that customary Carolinian marriage is widely practiced and recognized here.

“Now, it is simply a matter of putting this information on the record for the court,” she said, adding that the government’s request for last-minute depositions serves no purpose other than to delay the case and further burden the plaintiffs.

The lawyer said the court should deny the government’s motion in full and allow the hearing on customary Carolinian marriage to proceed.

Carolinian customary relationships that are not solemnized are not marriages, according to Timmons. He stated that, on the other hand, Carolinian customary relationships that are solemnized are marriages.

Timmons said the court should dismiss Pua’s complaint for loss of consortium.

Loss of consortium refers to a cause of action in a civil lawsuit that is available to family members of a person injured or killed by the wrongful acts of another.

DOJ does not object to stay of Guanlao’s case

The U.S. government took no position on Stephen Woodruff’s request to allow him withdraw as counsel for a Filipino mother who is challenging an order for her removal from the CNMI.

If the U.S. District Court for the NMI does allow Woodruff to withdraw, then the U.S. government would not object to staying Amalia Abo Guanlao’s case, according to Kimberly Helvey, senior litigation counsel for the Department of Justice Office of Immigration.

That would allow Guanlao to get a new lawyer, she said.

Guanlao is suing then-U.S. Department of Homeland Secretary Jeh Johnson and several U.S. immigration officials to contest her removal from the CNMI. She has two U.S. children, both minors.

In his motion to withdraw,

Woodruff said to his observation, Guanlao is now unable to accept his advice, think clearly about her case, or grasp his explanation of matters related to her case.

Woodruff said Guanlao has repeated errors in her perception and understanding of matters relating to her case.

U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona has stayed Guanlao’s removal while the court hears her petition.

In his request to withdraw, Woodruff said he fears that the improper conduct of DOJ, who is counsel for the respondents, has permanently damaged the attorney-client relationship.

He said if the court grants his motion to withdraw, the respondents’ motion to disqualify him as counsel for Guanlao should be denied on the merits, not as moot.

Woodruff said he believes that Guanlao had been very poorly served by her previous lawyers.

Woodruff said he is firmly convinced that the removal proceedings against Guanlao were illegal and that there is no legal or moral justification for the way she has been treated by Immigration and Customs Enforcement, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, and now DOJ’s Office of Immigration Litigation.

Last Jan. 12, the respondents, through DOJ, filed a motion to disqualify Woodruff, who has been disbarred from practice in the CNMI courts. A disciplinary case against Woodruff is pending in the District Court for the NMI to determine whether to impose reciprocal discipline. (Ferdie de la Torre)

A woman who allegedly used her dress shop in Chalan Kanoa as a front to sell methamphetamine or "ice" broke down in tears after pleading guilty on Friday.

Hong Xia Shao Ayuyu, 46, pleaded guilty to two counts of illegal possession of a controlled substance. A court marshal later brought her tissue and water to calm her down.

Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho set her sentencing for Aug. 2, 2017.

Ayuyu, through assistant public defender Cindy Nesbit, asked that she be allowed to remain out of custody pending her sentencing but her request was denied. Camacho

An ex-convict who was slapped in 2012 with a 24-month prison term after being convicted of possession of a firearm has admitted to allegations that he has been using methamphetamine or "ice" again, in violation of his supervision condition.

Justin A. Funkugub's lawyer, David G. Banes, told the U.S. District Court for the NMI on Friday that his client's "ice" use was just once in the last almost four months, since November 2016. He recommended a sentence of just 30 days, all suspended except 15 days. The sentencing was held Friday.

Banes said that Funkugub gave in to temptation as he had been repeatedly trying to contact his foster family and only realized that day that they had abandoned him.

Even so, Banes said, Funkugub did not go looking for "ice" or alcohol. Instead, someone came to him and offered him a hit from a lit pipe.

The lawyer said Funkugub was feeling depressed so he gave in and took the pipe.

Banes asked the court to allow Funkugub to continue to be a productive member of society and a good husband and father to his adopted family.

Ex-convict Funkugub admits to using 'ice' again

He said 15 days of prison term is appropriate so Funkugub won't lose his job or his last chance at having a family.

Funkugub was summoned to appear before U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge David O. Carter on Friday, for revocation hearing.

According to U.S. probation officer Gregory F. Arriola, Funkugub tested positive for the use of methamphetamine last Jan. 11. He said Funkugub also violated the location monitoring program rules when he made an unauthorized movement last Jan. 30.

Arriola said Funkugub first denied using "ice" but later admitted, saying he was tired and needed the energy.

Last Nov. 9, the court revoked Funkugub's probation for testing positive for "ice" use. He was sentenced to eight days imprisonment, followed by 26 months of supervised release.

In November 2012, Funkugub was sentenced to 24 months in prison for pleading guilty to the offense of felon in possession of a firearm. He was given credit for 40 days of time served.

Funkugub was found in possession of a revolver that had an obliterated serial number.

In February 2015, the court revoked Funkugub's supervised release for admitting to drug use on multiple occasions and his failure to report for drug testing and counseling sessions. He was ordered to serve three months in prison, followed by a 33-month term of supervised release.

In July 2015, the U.S. Probation found out that the defendant used "ice" on two separate occasions and failed to report to multiple counseling sessions. The court did not revoke his probation as he was compliant and was taking care of a sick uncle.

Last May, the U.S. Probation found out that Funkugub failed to attend a counseling session, failed to report to two drug tests, failed to follow a probation officer's instructions, and admitted to "ice" use last June 7.

Last June, the court sentenced him to three days of time served, followed by 27 months of supervised release. Funkugub was ordered to serve six months under home detention. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Woman selling 'ice' at dress shop pleads guilty

said that Ayuyu can no longer be presumed innocent after pleading guilty.

Ayuyu was found in possession of 1.6 gross grams of "ice" on Nov. 1, 2016 and 34.5 gross grams of "ice" on Nov. 12, 2016.

The Office of the Attorney General initially charged Ayuyu with two counts of trafficking of a controlled substance and two counts of illegal possession of a controlled substance. The charges carry a maximum sentence of 65 years in prison.

The OAG later amended the charges to only two counts of illegal possession of a controlled substance. The charges carry a maximum prison term of 10 years.

Assistant attorney general Chester Hinds appeared for the government.

Police said the CNMI Drug Enforcement Task Force received information that the defendant, also known as Mama, sells "ice" at her business establishment, known as C.K. Dress Shop.

A cooperating defendant managed to buy 1.6 gross grams of "ice" worth $180 from Ayuyu in the back of the dress shop. The same cooperating defendant purchased $660 worth of 3.6 gross grams of "ice" from Ayuyu a few days later.

The task force arrested Ayuyu last Nov. 12. She was released after asking to serve as a cooperating defendant, but was re-arrested for allegedly not cooperating with law enforcers. Ayuyu was re-arrested in Chalan Kanoa. (Ferdie De La Torre)

GRT special account to be source of additional funds

By JON PEREZ
jon\_perez@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A bill to create a special account where casino gross revenue tax funds would go has been recommended for passage in the House of Representatives.

The Ways and Means Committee chaired by Rep. Angel A. Demapan (R-Saipan), has recommended that House Bill 20-15 be included in the calendar in next week's session.

Demapan introduced the measure.

The bill seeks to allow the Department of Public Safety, Department of Fire and Emergency Medical Services, Northern Marianas College, Northern Marianas Trades Institute, and the CNMI drug court to receive funds from the special account.

"But that would have to be done by an appropriation bill when the revenues have been declared as available [for allocation]. HB 20-15 sets up the account, with the money as additional source of funds for these agencies [and] includes payment for the fuel adjustment charge of the Commonwealth Utilities Corp."

"It also included the CNMI State Public School System, the medical referral program, the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp., and land compensation."

HB 20-15 reserves a total of $15 million of the casino GRT to cover any shortfall in paying off 25 percent of retirees' pensions "to compensate for the absence of the fifth-year payment of the casino license fee, which was paid in advance together with the first year's payment pursuant to the casino license agreement," said Demapan.

The Division of Customs, Latte Training Academy, and the Commonwealth Transit Authority were also included as recipient of funds aside from DPS, DFEMS, CNMI drug court, NMC, and NMTI.

Demapan said these agencies provide vital services that serve, protect, and educate the people. "In addition to enhancing the overall outlook of our Commonwealth. [Ways and Means] further finds the need to enhance our law enforcement agencies with the CNMI's population increasing and the spike in our economy."

"Law enforcement authorities would require to be prepared in using modern equipment and tools, and have additional manpower to be able to perform and respond to their increasing responsibilities with the CNMI's growing population and construction of buildings."

The drug court was established to rehabilitate and treat individuals who become addicted to illegal drugs and substance abusers. "We found that there is a need to provide funding assistance to support the costs associated with expert and specialized treatment services for its participants."

‘Agricultural homestead suitable for Pagan’

Legislators believe the island of Pagan is suitable for an agricultural homestead program, which is one of the things that the late Northern Islands mayor Jerome K. Aldan had been pushing for, aside from opposing planned bombing activities by the U.S. military.

Sen. Justo S. Quitagua (Ind-Saipan) said that—creating a homestead program on Pagan—is one of the goals of Public Law 16-50, which he co-authored in the House of Representatives with former Speaker Oscar M. Babauta and then-representative Joseph N. Camacho.

PL 16-50 is the former House Bill 16-146 that would establish a village and an agricultural homestead program in the Northern Islands.

Quitagua said PL 16-50 gives Northern Island natives currently living on Saipan a reason to return to their home islands in Pagan.

“[PL 16-50] allows and opens up the homesteading program. We have residents of the Northern Islands here living on Saipan where they could return and establish villages and agricultural homestead in the islands where they were born.”

He added that the Northern Islanders could not avail of the homesteading programs on Saipan since they are not originally from here. “At the same time there’s not enough land for the homesteading program here.”

“[PL 16-50] gives them the opportunity of having a place of their own—‘this is my land, my home, my farm, my ranch.’ They will have their names on the property and they will be the owners.”

Quitagua said that Aldan was passionate in convincing the Department of Public Lands to open up the homestead program in Pagan to help residents who want to return to one of the northernmost islands in the CNMI.

Aldan passed away on Jan. 18. He was rushed to the Commonwealth Health Center when he collapsed after having a late dinner in a restaurant in San Jose.

Reps. Ivan A. Blanco (R-Saipan) and Edmund S. Villagomez said that it was Aldan’s vision to help his constituents settle back on Pagan and cultivate the land.

“The late mayor really pushed hard for the welfare of the people of the Northern Islands. He is passionate in re-establishing villages up there, especially in Pagan. Amongst the other things that he wanted were economic opportunities for the Northern Islanders,” said Villagomez.

Blanco added that the CNMI should help make Aldan’s vision of developing Pagan a reality so people can move back.

“I think that we should not let any barrier stop us with that vision. One of DPL’s visions is to also issue agricultural lands to the people of the Northern Islands, for residents there to farm and cultivate their own land.”

Blanco sees a lot of opportunity for the island of Pagan. “I believe we could develop Pagan as an agricultural and farming island where produce could also help the CNMI. The only issue that we need to resolve is finding a way of transporting these goods from Pagan and to the other islands.”

“It might be a little bit of a challenge but there’s always a solution to every problem. We should grab the opportunities that we have in front of us and study our options.”

Rep. Angel A. Demapan (R-Saipan) said it was Aldan who put up the plans for the Northern Frontier program that would develop Pagan. “Mayor Aldan was passionate with the homestead program from the beginning. He was among those who planned to develop Pagan.”

“He has a vision and ambitious plans that is reflective of his spirit and passion of serving his people. What he wanted for the people of Pagan and the CNMI is to one day resettle on the lands that is rightfully theirs and build communities there like in Saipan, Tinian, and Rota.” (Jon Perez)

EPA: No CUC violation in drinking water regs in 2016

The Commonwealth Utilities Corp. did not violate the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency’s water regulations in 2016, according to EPA inspector John Tinger.

In his declaration, Tinger stated that CUC reported compliance with all primary drinking water quality standards in 2016 and did not have any case of exceeding total coliform standards in 2016.

E. coliform is a fecal bacteria and is an indication of sewage or animal waste contamination. It is an indicator of potential drinking water contamination but is not, in itself, an immediate health risk, according to EPA.

Tinger said that in June 2012, CUC violated EPA’s primary drinking water regulations for E. coliform in the Koblerville area due to leaks and disrupted water service.

Since 2012, CUC reported compliance with E. coliform standards, said the EPA inspector in his declaration.

Tinger’s declaration was filed in federal court in support of the U.S. government’s February 2017 status report about CUC projects.

CUC did violate EPA’s primary drinking water regulations for total coliform bacteria since 2012 but steps were immediately taken to remedy the situation. Tinger cited that in four separate instances, CUC exceeded total coliform standards due to leaks, disrupted water service, and in one case, heavy rains.

He said CUC addressed the problem by fixing the leak and flushing the water distribution system, bringing the utilities agency to compliance. (Ferdie de la Torre)

President Trump forces the issue of illegal immigration

Will we continue to be a nation with a heart? Trump is forcing us to finally give an answer. The immigration debate has festered for years. The nation's unwillingness to resolve it has been shameful. Now, President Donald Trump has ripped the scab off this wound with a tough policy against those here illegally that should drive a comprehensive solution to our broken system.

What happens next will be a test for the nation—for its legal and political systems, law enforcement, economy, communities and most especially its values. This will play out for a long time, and it is unclear whether taxpayers will be willing to spend billions of dollars to deport those workers who are a key part of our economy. For now, Trump has succeeded in conveying his clear message: We don't want you here.

Some immigrants here without proper documentation might decide to leave, others are likely to withdraw deeper into the shadows. And those who were thinking of coming here might decide to stay put.

Unfortunately, he also is creating fear with dissonant information from his administration. The official line is that there will be no mass deportations and, instead, criminals are the priority for expulsion. But Trump has widened the net of those at risk to include anyone who has abused a public-benefits program such as food stamps. There will be no deportation force, officials say, but Trump wants to hire 10,000 new Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents and 5,000 Border Patrol agents and build deportation centers. Trump will deal with people brought here as children "with heart," he says, without explaining what the guidelines will be for those known as Dreamers.

Some Americans want to kick out each and every one of the estimated 11 million people here without legal status. Many are more willing to find a comprehensive and compassionate solution. Let's be clear, violent criminals and those with histories of violating the law must be sent back. But many immigrants are long-time law-abiding residents with children who are citizens, and they work and pay taxes and contribute to their communities. How do we strike a balance?

The tricky calculus has many variables, and many players will shape the solution. Congress must decide whether to pay to hire thousands of ICE agents and how quickly it can be done. There are 2,000 Border Patrol vacancies because of the difficulty in finding agents who meet the agency's standards. The courts will weigh in on issues like due process; one measure unlikely to pass muster subjects to deportation anyone whose acts could result in a "chargeable criminal offense." That is a very broad category. Multiple layers of government—states, cities, counties, towns, villages, sheriffs and police—must decide their degree of cooperation with federal agents. They should be wary of apprehending anyone unless presented with a judicial warrant authorizing the arrest.

Four years ago, nasty partisanship derailed a Senate bill that offered a solution for dealing with those who are here illegally but are integral members of our communities. Trump is forcing us to finally solve this problem. It's not enough to say we are a nation of laws, because we also are a nation of values. How we respond will define us.

Truth-seeking press not the enemy

The next time you read about a newsroom making cuts, think about the extraordinary reporting shedding light on the new administration.

When I made that point in a tweet recently, it accumulated more than a thousand "likes." Of course, it fell on deaf ears at the White House, where, two days later, @realDonaldTrump tweeted: "The FAKE NEWS media (failing @nytimes, @NBCNews, @ABC, @CBS, @CNN) is not my enemy, it is the enemy of the American People!"

The last time I checked, he had generated 154,693 likes, but it didn't persuade me. Nor, apparently, the many who began using the hashtag #NotTheEnemy.

From literally day one—think crowd size at the inauguration—President Trump has used every opportunity to bash the "mainstream" media. Typical were his comments at that epic news conference:

"The press has become so dishonest that if we don't talk about it, we are doing a tremendous disservice to the American people—tremendous disservice. ... The level of dishonesty is out of control.

"... How does the press get this information that's classified? ... Because it's an illegal process, and the press should be ashamed of themselves. But, more importantly, the people that gave out the information to the press should be ashamed of themselves. Really ashamed."

The president is attacking one of our best checks on government—especially at a time when Congress shows no interest in playing that role with regard to the relationship between the president's pals and Russia. His anger was precipitated by revelatory journalism that takes time and money, including:

CNN's accurate report Jan. 12 that both President Barack Obama and the president-elect were briefed on "allegations that Russian operatives claim to have compromising personal and financial information about Mr. Trump."

David Ignatius' Jan. 12 report in the Washington Post revealing that Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn had spoken with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak regarding the sanctions imposed by Obama.

And the New York Times' front-page, above-the-fold story Feb. 15 revealing that Trump associates had ongoing dialogues with Russian intelligence officials in the year before the election.

We know (what little) we know only because of old-fashioned, gumshoe reporting of the kind that is in short supply these days because of newsroom layoffs across the country. Sure, there's been an explosion of self-described journalist bloggers, but people with laptops sitting in their PJs are no substitute for investigative reporters. Where print advertising has plummeted and newspaper staffs have been eviscerated, we are seeing a damaging trend where there's less investigative journalism and government goes unchecked. And not just on a national level. Think about some of the local stories uncovered by sleuthing.

Nobody likes leaking, including me. But the reality is that were it not for the leaks about Michael Flynn, he'd still be a national security adviser who'd spoken with the Russian ambassador about sanctions but said otherwise publicly and to the vice president—a situation known both to him and the Russians, creating the risk of blackmail.

Trump attempted to cloak himself in the words of a founding father while speaking at a rally last weekend in Florida. He quoted Thomas Jefferson as saying in 1807 that "nothing can be believed which is seen in a newspaper." The full quote, which was contained in a letter to John Norvell, is more nuanced:

"It is a melancholy truth, that a suppression of the press could not more completely (sic) deprive the nation of its benefits, than is done by its abandoned prostitution to falsehood. Nothing can now be believed which is seen in a newspaper. Truth itself becomes suspicious by being put into that polluted vehicle."

Jefferson had grown more skeptical of the press while president. But 20 years prior, as U.S. minister to France, Jefferson said the following in a letter to Edward Carrington:

"Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter. But I should mean that every man should receive those papers and be capable of reading them."

Requiem for a liberal

As I write this, on Friday morning, I learned that Alan Colmes passed away of lymphoma—a particularly nasty form of cancer. Alan was the token liberal spokesman on Fox News, and also had his own radio talk show on the Fox network. He had done well.

I first met Alan 43 years ago, in 1974. I had just finished directing a musical, which ran for many weeks, and I needed a break. Somehow I discovered the wacky comedy of Monty Python's Flying Circus, and thought, "I'd like to do something like that..."

I was living in Boston at the time and put an ad in the Boston Phoenix—"funny people needed for a comedy group." Alan answered my ad, as did another friend, John Roarke (a fantastic impressionist).

Colmes

So Alan, John and I formed a comedy trio. We called ourselves "Excuse Me" and got work at the Boston Playboy Club in their newly-opened comedy room. We also toured colleges in New England and did pretty well. It was exciting—to write a comedy sketch and then put it on before an appreciative audience.

Comedians tend to be loners, and we became our own best friends. Sometimes John and I would take the train out to Alan's parents house in Lynbrook, Long Island.

Alan had a gorgeous redhead girlfriend named Joyce. In addition to being beautiful, Joyce also played the accordion. So she'd be playing Lady of Spain, and Alan would wisecrack, "Isn't she FABULOUS?" John and I would howl and Joyce always looked baffled.

"Excuse Me" continued for another year, but we weren't making any money and there were not good agents in Boston. Both John and Alan struck out for New York City, while I went up to New Hampshire to teach English and direct plays at Milford High School.

Alan and John quickly became regulars at The Comic Strip, a comedy club on Second Avenue. They kept calling me to quit teaching and to come down to join them. I eventually did, in 1978, but by then John and Alan were establishing themselves as solo comics.

Alan was starting to do well in radio also. He was first on WPIX and sometimes John and I would visit him in the studio and be goofy for his listeners. Gorgeous Joyce was the engineer—but no accordion playing, thank goodness.

The really fun part was taking phone calls from the listeners. I did a character called "Bleeto the Elf" and would appear on the show each Christmastime. I talked in a high squeaky voice, and brought some prepared jokes. The audience loved Bleeto, and Alan was the perfect straight man.

Bleeto: "I have worked for the S. Clause Foundation for a very long time. And, after you've been with Mr. Claus for 10 years, they move you up the ladder."

Alan: "The corporate ladder?"

Bleeto: "No, it's a little yellow plastic thing you climb."

By the early 1980's Alan got scooped up by WABC, also in New York, but it was a little too formal for Bleeto the Elf and funny guests, unless they were celebrities. John got hired by an ABC TV show, "Fridays," which was ABC's answer to Saturday Night Live. "Fridays" ran for two years and helped launch the career of Michael Richards (also known as Kramer). I started writing for television—the USA network had a comedy show, "Commander USA's Groovie Movies." Later I went over to VH1, where they were launching a live, funny, morning show—"The VH1 Eggman." As one of the other writers later remarked, "If we had just worked a little harder, the show could have been a piece of crap." But I continued to do stand-up comedy, and was scouted by Saturday Night Live, which was terrific. But they didn't hire me. It happens.

WNBC offered Alan a great afternoon spot, and he couldn't resist the opportunity or the money offered. In fact, he was the last announcer on WNBC; after that they closed the station. But Alan continued to do stand-up and was frequently the M.C. at The Comic Strip.

One of the best things Alan Colmes ever did for me was an sites," not how many national parks you've been to in the mainland, not whether my son thinks about soldiers, and not about all the federal aid given to the island. My son is a young student who courageously stood in front of all of you to communicate his and his generation's view of opposition. He did not shout insults from the back of the crowd. He did not try to embarrass nor intimidate you. He politely and respectfully apologized beforehand if his views would not be popular but believed the issue to be important enough to have the courage to stand before his elders, the feds and deliver his message of opposition.

If you don't agree with my son and you believe that federal takeover of our cultural sites and natural resources is "for our own good," then by all means say so. Please don't resort to being a bully and intimidating my son. I may be wrong, but from what I understand from a U.S. Army Green Beret special forces Vietnam veteran who has also been to many national parks, thinks about all the soldiers overseas and is blatantly aware of the federal aid given to the islands, that berating, embarrassing, and intimidating children in front of the feds and our own people holds absolutely no honor whatsoever. Your conduct that evening was dishonorable, insulting and completely unbecoming of any who wore that uniform.

If you were upset with his aunt's testimony and were insulted that she was not there herself, please feel free to communicate your view with her directly. Her name is Angelita Mendiola and she's married to Diego D. Mendiola, who by the way is the vet-

By RUSS MASON, M.S.

Special to the Saipan Tribune

For the better part of a decade, Russ Mason wrote for a medical journal, Alternative & Complementary Therapies. His principal assignment was to interview a physician or other health care practitioner about new and important treatments, as well as diet and nutrition. Prior to that, he worked at NBC in New York for 16 years, often as a writer for their television programs.

introduction to my act when I appeared at The Comic Strip. He said, "Now I want to bring up a guy who used to write for Saturday Night Live!" The audience nearly exploded at this announcement. Alan then said, "Unfortunately, they didn't use much of his material..." But the audience thought it was a joke—and that I was some special, anointed, comedic genius. That night I could do no wrong: "I killed."

The truth was that SNL did indeed use some of my material, but I never got writing credit or even pay. This was 1982, and there was a new producer, Jean Doumanian. They were going through writers like a fat man through French fries. Jean was in way over her head and Lorne Michaels was coaxed back to produce the show.

I am not sure when Alan made the leap to Fox News, to co-star with Sean Hannity. Hannity had his own show at the time, and felt Alan would be a great asset, to represent the liberal point of view, in contrast to Hannity's conservatism. The ratings soared and "Hannity & Colmes" became the most-watched show in the Fox lineup.

With his new career as a TV personality, Alan cut back on doing stand-up. After three years together with Sean Hannity, Alan got the boot. I asked him about this, but he was dismissive in his reply. However, a well-connected friend said that Alan embarrassed Karl Rove on live TV, and that Rove made some phone calls to Fox management to get Alan dumped.

Still, Alan appeared as a guest commentator, appearing with Bill O'Reilly and other Fox personalities. He also had a very successful radio show during the daytime, mostly taking calls from idiotic listeners. If someone said something inappropriate, Alan would punch the phone button and say, "You're next! Hello!"

Personally, Alan was perhaps the kindest and most gracious friend I ever had. I never heard him curse or berate anyone. He didn't drink alcohol, smoke, or take drugs. And he was always, always funny. I once told him, "You're the most Christian Jew I know." He didn't know how to respond to that, but then he said, "Thank you I think."

eran I mentioned above and assisted his father, Thomas Mendiola, care for the Mochong Latte Stone site on their family land and many others here on Rota for decades before you even knew the meaning and importance of cultural sites.

My son was embarrassed, hurt, ashamed, traumatized for having upset you and people like you and reluctant to show his face in school. I had to nurse him all night from the psychological and emotional scar caused by your disrespectful and shameful behavior at the hearing. If that is the result you were hoping for, then you successfully accomplished your mission, soldier! The honorable thing would be to apologize to him in front of the same crowd. I guess time will tell just how much "honor" you, who has been to many national parks, have left in your soul! Tai respetu! Tai mamahlao dimasio!

To the National Parks Services, I pray that you will in the future better conduct these types of hearings in keeping them orderly, civil and not allow your supporters to intimidate children, like my son, who garnered admirable courage to express their belief in a respectful manner. He only sought to communicate his devotion to his island's cultural sites but was instead silenced and left unable to finish his message. If you truly were interested in the views of the future generation, you would have led by example and afforded him his right to speak.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

NPS holds kangaroo hearing on Rota

On Wednesday, Feb. 22, 2017, the National Parks Service held a public hearing to obtain testimonies on the issue regarding the NPS' potential takeover of a number of cultural sites on Rota. My 15-year-old son gathered his courage to stand in front of the gathered crowd and deliver his testimony in opposition to any such takeover. In addition to his own testimony, he also attempted to read a testimony of his aunt who, by virtue of health, was unable to attend in person. While trying to deliver such testimonies, he was several times rudely interrupted, berated and embarrassed by a 50-plus-year-old retired Army veteran. This veteran went completely off the subject at hand, told my son that he has been to many national parks, asked my son if he thinks about soldiers serving across seas, whether my son knows about all the federal aid given to the island, and if my son is making insults to soldiers.

To him I say this: Sir, thank you for your service. If you had no amount of intelligence to understand the subject nor clue, the issue being discussed was "federal takeover of Rota's cultural

Family grief support group meeting

The Compassionate Friends of Saipan will be holding its monthly grief support meeting on Thursday, March 2, from 6pm to 7:30pm, in the NMPASI conference room on Middle Road, in Gualo Rai. We offer understanding and hope to parents, siblings and grandparents who are grieving the loss of a child of any age, and from any cause. We provide a safe, confidential setting, in which to share our experiences, while respecting and supporting each other, and listening. We have "been there." We do not espouse any specific religious or philosophical ideology. There is no "right way" to grieve, and family members are welcome to come to share or just to listen.

The mission of The Compassionate Friends is to assist families toward the positive resolution of grief following the death of a child of any age and to provide information to help others to be supportive. Today more than 600 chapters serving all 50 states plus Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico, Guam, and Saipan offer friendship, understanding, and hope to bereaved parents, siblings and grandparents and other family members during the natural grieving process after a child has died.

For more information, e-mail tcfSaipan@gmail.com or call Jill Derickson (989-9821) or Donna Krum (783-1900). To learn more about The Compassionate Friends, visit their website at www.compassionatefriends.org. (PR)

Tinian re-opens public market

Tinian Mayor Joey Patrick San Nicolas officially opened the new Tinian Public Market open in a ribbon cutting held at the newly renovated facility near the Port of Tinian last Friday.

In attendance were Senate President Arnold Palacios (R-Saipan), Lands and Natural Resources Secretary Richard Seman, elected Tinian leaders, Saipan Farmer's Market chair R.B. Camacho, as well as a host of Tinian farmers who are ready to market their produce.

The Tinian Public Market will be providing meat slicing and meat chilling services as well.

"We have two meat slicers and are working on rehabilitating the two walk-in chillers," said TPM manager Joe Borja. "We will have hours for our ranchers to come in and request for the slicing of their frozen meat. We are looking forward to restarting operations."

On Friday, on display at the market were radishes, tangerines, bananas, lettuce, tomatoes, eggplants, pumpkins, green onions, soursap, and pomelo, to name a few.

Hofschneider, Lands and Natural Resources Secretary Richard Seman, Tinian DLNR resident department head Guillermo Borja, and Fr. Rey Rosal

Tinian mayor chief of staff Allen Perez, a backyard farmer himself, said the market is intended to entice Tinian residents to go back to farming, not just as a hobby but also as a career.

"There are dozens of Tinian residents who have... agriculture lots. It is our hope that they will go back to farming on their lots and market their produce to our community. With our relationship with the Saipan Farmer's Market we hope to ship and sell Tinian produce [on] Saipan," said San Nicolas.

San Nicolas thanked the Tinian Legislative Delegation for appropriating $40,000 to the operation of the market and for the $75,000 appropriation for a new tractor for the DLNR.

In his closing remarks, Tinian Municipal Council chair Antonio SN Borja said the market will also provide access to healthy foods for the manhoben (youth) and man'amko (elderly). (PR)

Saipan Chamber seeks to raise funds with golf tourney

This year's annual Saipan Chamber of Commerce 2017 Golf Tournament is looking to bring back some fun to the golf course. We encourage players of all skill levels and talents to join this tournament. Men and women golfers are sure to have a beautiful day on LaoLao Bay Golf & Resort west course with holes sponsored by Chamber members. A banquet will immediately follow the close of the tournament. The show time is 6am on March 4, 2017, with a shotgun start at 7am.

The format is a two-person scramble. The entry fee is $120/non-member and $110/Chamber member. Cash prizes include first place, $800; second place, $500; and third place, $300 for each of the two categories: Team gross and Team double peoria. There will also be closest-to-the-pin, longest drive, and accurate drive contests. Triple J Motors will sponsor a hole-in-one prize of a 2017 Mazda 6. Three hole-in-one opportunities of $5,000 each are offered by Pacifica Insurance, McDonald's Saipan, and the Chamber's Saipan Young Professionals.

Funds raised by the tournament and raffle will support the Chamber's scholarship program, monthly training seminars, and other community based projects. Among the activities offered in 2016 were:

- Chamber scholarships:
  - four $2,000 scholarships to high school seniors,
  - one $2,000 scholarship to an NMC college student
  - one $2,000 scholarship to an NMTI student.

- 2016 Business and Finance Conference hosted with the Bank of Guam and the Commonwealth Development Authority

- A Labor Visa Symposium to increase awareness of the options available for employee visas.

Fabulous raffle prizes have been donated, and tickets will be available for purchase during the awards banquet at the end of the tournament. Sponsorships and raffle prizes are currently being collected and we expect this will be the most exciting event yet. Registration forms for players are available for download at www.saipanchamber.com, at the Chamber office, and LaoLao Bay Golf & Resort.

The Chamber is pleased to have the support of its generous members and looks forward to offering new programs to enhance the business community on Saipan in the upcoming year. (SCC)

DOG CONTROL PROGRAM

Saipan Mayor David Apatang receives a $4,710 donation on Feb. 15, 2017, at the Marianas Visitors Authority office for the dog control program. The funds were raised from proceeds of the Marianas Sunset Fun Run in January 2017 and matched by the MVA. ## UOG Theater presents: The Crucible

The University of Guam Fine Arts Theater opens spring 2017 with the gripping and moving American drama, The Crucible by Arthur Miller at the UOG Fine Arts Theatre.

Set during the Salem witch trials in colonial Massachusetts in 1692, Miller's play was at the time a thinly-veiled criticism of McCarthyism. Watch how the town of Salem is torn apart when a group of hysterical teenagers inflict damage with their unfounded rumors and accusations.

Evening performances are at 7pm from Thursday to Saturday, March 2-4.

Matinee performances are at 2pm on Saturday and Sunday, March 4 and 5.

Box office opens at 6:30pm for evening performances and 1:30pm for matinee performances.

General admission is $10. Tickets for students and seniors cost $7.50. The show is free for University of Guam or Guam Community College students with valid student I.D. or class schedule. Tickets can be purchased at the box office on show nights.

Marine biology outreach seeks to inspire youth

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

Feb. 4 was a busy day for Valeri Lapacek.

A University of Guam master of science in Biology candidate and University of Guam Sea Grant fellow, Lapacek was hosting a community outreach called “A Day in the Life of a Marine Biologist.”

During the outreach, Lapacek taught kids about what marine biologists do, shared her excitement about the ocean and its inhabitants, and educated them about the importance of corals.

“I am trying to spark passion and excitement in the participants for coral reefs. In order to increase conservation and protection, people must care about the environment,” said Lapacek. “If you don’t find it exciting or you don’t know much about the ocean, why would you want to protect it?”

Sea Grant fellows—UOG graduate students receiving funds to support their research—must design and implement outreach activities as part of their proposed work plans.

The five-hour “Day in the Life” at UOG’s Marine Lab included tasks that a marine biologist may perform regularly. Youth participants, ages 7 to 15 years old, observed jellyfish, sea cucumbers, and starfish in touch tanks, practicing survey techniques used to describe and monitor organisms. They also spent a few hours doing lab work.

“At one station, kids were able to dissect a coral polyp and examine its eggs—all while looking through a microscope. The other station allowed kids to grind up coral tissue into a slurry, make a microscope slide, and use a microscope to look for tiny algae cells that live in coral tissue,” said Lapacek.

The coral tissue lab stations were particularly important to Lapacek, who researches the reproductive biology of Guam’s staghorn Acropora coral. She examines how coral health impacts, such as bleaching events, impact the staghorn coral’s ability to reproduce efficiently.

Community collaboration

Big Brothers Big Sisters Guam is a nonprofit agency that matches children (“Littles”) facing adversity with adult “Big” brothers or sisters. The organization also manages an AmeriCorps cohort of volunteers based at school and community sites.

“In a nutshell, we match volunteer role models with youth for a one-to-one mentoring relationship. We provide case management support for the matches and we plan regular enrichment activities for the program participants,” says BBBSG executive director Vanessa Estella.

Lapacek chose to work with this organization for a few specific reasons.

“First, I was able to target two audiences: kids, and young adults. Secondly, the BBBSG pairs had to work together as a team to complete the tasks, since most of the activities were challenging,” said Lapacek.

The importance of this outreach event resounded heavily with T-squad interns and BBBSG volunteers.

“Outreaches like these that expose youth to different careers could allow them to start developing dreams and start thinking about the kind of future they could have someday,” said T-squad intern and junior biology major Marcel Jardeleza. “This event was the definition of ‘bringing science to the people.’”

BBBSG AmeriCorps volunteer Domini Prudente said, “Kids experienced a new world of creatures that piqued their curiosity. This event also allowed them to experience socializing with intellectuals

Interior remits $231.5 M rum taxes to USVI

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Acting Interior Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula has approved an adjustment payment of $18,173,711 million to the U.S. Virgin Islands government for fiscal year 2016 rum excise tax actuals. The amount has been certified by the U.S. Department of the Treasury and represents the final rum excise tax payment owed to the U.S. Virgin Islands for the 2016 fiscal year.

“We recognize these funds are critical to government operations in the USVI and are working closely with Gov. Kenneth Mapp and his staff to ensure the funds are transferred as quickly as possible,” said Pula.

Adjustments are calculated based upon amounts advanced from rum excise taxes derived from the USVI and collected by the federal government under the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands (48 USC 1541). Under current law, any excise tax collected on USVI manufactured rum imported into the United States is transferred to or “covered-over” to the USVI. The USVI government submits its advance estimate of rum excise taxes to the Department of the Interior’s Office of Insular Affairs on an annual basis so that payment can be made in September of each fiscal year.

The initial 2016 advance of $213,325,000 was paid in September 2015. The actual taxes certified for 2016 totaled $231,498,711. An advance payment of $202,725,000 to the USVI was made in September 2016 for 2017 rum excise taxes. (OIA)

CrossFit workout fad powers its way into school PE classes

By JOHN KEILMAN
CHICAGO TRIBUNE/TNS

The most popular PE class at Waukegan High School takes place in a basement field house that has the ambience of a dungeon. Sweating is assured. Vomiting is not unusual.

Students do a five-minute group burpee ladder activity at the end of Greg Moio's cross fit physical education class on Wednesday, Sept. 28, 2016 at Waukegan High School in Waukegan, Ill.
JOSE M. OSORIO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE/TNS

A healthy, active lifestyle

The benefits of a healthy, active lifestyle can be classified as either:

SOCIAL: You have all the basics necessities of life: family, friends, food, a home, and a role in society.

MENTAL: You feel good about yourself, your emotions are under control, and you do not feel stressed.

PHYSICAL: All the body systems are working well and you have no illness or injury.

It's the school's version of CrossFit, the intense and trendy exercise regimen that has exploded in popularity over the last 16 years, spawning thousands of gyms, more than 1 million devotees and a professional competition broadcast on ESPN.

Schools around the Chicago area have adopted CrossFit to stir student interest at a time of rising youth obesity, and some say it's reaching children left cold by traditional gym classes.

"I think it's a great way to teach kids lifelong fitness, especially those kids who aren't interested in hockey or soccer or basketball," said teacher Tracy Haraf of Alsip's Stony Creek Elementary, which devotes half of its PE days to CrossFit exercises. "They think it's tough, but I think they have a lot of fun doing it."

But some doctors and researchers advise caution, saying the weightlifting-oriented workouts can lead to injuries, particularly when performed by the inexperienced. CrossFit Inc., the company that certifies trainers and licenses gyms, has fired back at that assessment, and the controversy is playing out in a pair of vitriolic lawsuits.

Yet gym teachers like Waukegan's Greg Moio, whose two-campus school has about 650 kids taking CrossFit each day, say the risk of injury can be curbed with proper supervision and CrossFit's inherent flexibility.

Moio pointed to a workout called "Death by Burpees," where every 1 minute and 20 seconds, students run a lap and perform an escalating number of burpees—a movement involving a squat, a pushup and a leap with hands held above the head. The challenge is to keep going as long as you can.

"That's the great thing, because something like running the mile, the worst kid is always last," Moio said. "Everybody knows who's last; that's a terrible feeling for a kid. Now, the last person is the best, and no one knows who dropped out in round three because they're too worried about trying to get their own butt around the (track)."

CrossFit bills itself as a pathway to all-around fitness, including strength, flexibility and endurance. It combines weightlifting with calisthenics and cardio work to create high-intensity workouts, often named for fallen members of the American military.

It also makes a priority of recording a participant's results and observing how they change over time—a practice that aligns perfectly with evermore data-driven school curricula.

"(Administrators) love that data," Moio said. "I can give these guys enough data to choke on about student growth."

Waukegan appears to be the local pioneer for PE CrossFit. Moio incorporated some of the exercises in 2008, then became a full-fledged CrossFit provider in 2010 after taking two training sessions.

Since then, the demand has grown so much that CrossFit classes are held every period (the school still offers conventional PE too). Senior Alexis Wiltz, 18, said the conditioning has improved her performance on the basketball court.

"I noticed I was faster, I paid more attention on the court, my defending was better," she said after a recent class. "It just really helped me."

The workout she and her classmates performed that day was relatively simple, using kettlebells, box jumps and burpees, but Moio said the class also includes weightlifting exercises such as squats and deadlifts.

That's the part that concerns observers like Dr. Craig Finlayson, an orthopedic surgeon at Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago. While strength training is fine for kids, he said, heavy weights can be trouble for teens who might hurt themselves by trying to do too much or using poor form.

"You've got some kids who are not fully developed," Finlayson said. "Put them in a competitive environment, doing exercises that may or may not lead to injury—might not be the best idea."

Song and dance, protest and politics to mingle at Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The 89th Academy Awards show promises to be equal parts pomp and politics.

The only thing expected to take the stage more often than the frothy front-runner “La La Land” at Sunday’s ceremony is protest (and probably some punchlines) over the policies of President Donald Trump. For largely liberal Hollywood, his election has proven a rallying cause-celebre throughout an awards season that has otherwise been a parade of honors for Damien Chazelle’s celebrated musical.

Just how political things are going to get at the Dolby Theatre in Los Angeles may be the biggest question of Sunday night’s show, to be broadcast by ABC beginning at 8:30 p.m. EST, with red carpet coverage starting earlier. The current forecast for Sunday is only a slight chance of rain, though the inside of the Dolby Theatre is expected to be far stormier.

Even the usually glitzy lead-up to Sunday’s show has taken on the form of a gathering tempest. On Friday, the United Talent Agency, forgoing its usual Oscar party, instead held a rally over immigration. “We will not tolerate chaos and ineptitude and war-mongering,” Jodie Foster told attendees.

More strikingly, the six directors of the foreign film nominees on Friday released a joint statement condemning “the climate of fanaticism and nationalism we see today in the U.S. and in so many other countries, in parts of the population and, most unfortunately of all, among leading politicians.”

The signees included the Iranian director Asghar Farhadi, whose “The Salesman” is favored to win him his second foreign language Oscar. He isn’t attending the awards out of protest for Trump’s proposed travel ban from seven predominantly Muslim nations, including Iran.

On Friday, he posted a vid-

eo thanking the Hollywood community for its support of his Oscar boycott. In it, Farhadi condemned Trump’s policies and said they are “trying to promote hate.”

And sure to stoke the rhetoric at Sunday’s Oscars is news this weekend that U.S. immigration authorities are barring entry to a 21-year-old Syrian cinematographer who worked on the documentary short nominee “The White Helmets,” about the nation’s civil war. Meanwhile, about 20 Trump supporters gathered Saturday at an intersection near the Dolby Theatre on Hollywood Boulevard. One held a sign with Trump’s signature slogan, “Make America Great Again,” while another sign asked motorists to honk if they supported Trump. There were few honks.

Some Trump supporters are calling for a boycott of the broadcast, expecting more speeches like Meryl Streep’s fiery remarks at the Globes—which prompted Trump to call her “overrated.” (The Academy of Motion Pictures on Friday added Streep, also a nominee, to its presenters.) But similar so-called boycotts have also trailed the Broadway sensation “Hamilton” and 2016’s top box-office hit, the “Star Wars” spinoff “Rogue One.”

ABC would be very happy with similar results, especially after last year’s telecast, hosted by Chris Rock, drew 34.4 million viewers, an eight-year low. Ads this year are still going for $2.1 million for 30-second spots.

Host Jimmy Kimmel will have a delicate balance on his hands. Play it too light and he’ll appear out of sync with the mood. Hammer too hard and he’ll alienate viewers already inundated by politics.

‘Moonlight’ sweeps Spirit Awards; Affleck wins best actor

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Sunday might be dominated by “La La Land,” but Saturday belonged to “Moonlight.”

Barry Jenkins’ luminous coming-of-age tale swept Saturday’s Film Independent Spirit Awards, taking home six awards including best feature. “Moonlight” won every award it was nominated for at the 32nd annual indie awards, the dressed-down, beachside ceremony held the day before the Academy Awards.

“Moonlight” won for its directing, screenplay, cinematography and editing. It was also honored for its ensemble cast in the Spirit Awards’ Robert Altman Award. Backstage, Jenkins said its tale of a poor, young, black kid in Miami stood in stark contrast to President Donald Trump’s administration.

“I think ‘Moonlight’ exists as a beacon of inclusivity,” said Jenkins, flanked by his African-American cast and producers.

The afternoon ceremony frequently had a strong political tenor. Casey Affleck, who won best actor for “Manchester by the Sea,” wore a shirt with the word “love” in Arabic.

'Hillary's America,' 'Batman v Superman' top Razzies

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Neither Batman nor Dinesh D'Souza could finagle their way out of a Razzie.

The annual Golden Raspberry Awards bestowed a tying four "honors" to both D'Souza's documentary "Hillary's America: The Secret History of the Democratic Party" and the superhero blockbuster "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice."

D'Souza's film was named the worst picture of the year on Saturday, and the conservative author got both worst director (with co-director Bruce Schooley) and worst actor for playing himself. Worst actress went to Rebekah Turner who played Hillary Clinton.

"This is absolutely fantastic," said D'Souza in a video statement. "My audience loves the fact that you hate me. Thank you."

Not to be outdone, Zack Snyder's $250 million "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice" also picked up four "wins" including worst remake, worst screenplay and worst screen combo for its dueling stars Ben Affleck and Henry Cavill. Jesse Eisenberg was also singled out as the worst supporting actor for his over-the-top portrayal of Superman baddie Lex Luthor.

Both films were widely panned by critics upon their release—D'Souza's film for being biased and sensationalist and Snyder's for its messiness. While D'Souza's outing is likely a one-time deal, there is more to come in the DC Comic Book Universe from Snyder whose "Justice League" hits theaters in Nov.

Another poorly received film, "Zoolander 2," got away with only one award, which went to Kristen Wiig for worst supporting actress.

The organization also bestowed the "redeemer" award to Mel Gibson, who was previously nominated for "The Expendables 3" and this year has climbed back up to the ranks to more prestigious awards. Gibson is nominated for a best director Oscar for his World War II film "Hacksaw Ridge."

The Razzie Awards are determined by around 1,000 voting Razzie members from 25 countries, while Worst Screen Combo was voted on by "thousands" through a Rotten Tomatoes partnership.

SHOWBIZ TIDBITS

Academy revokes '13 Hours' sound mixer's Oscar nomination

LOS ANGELES (AP)—One day before the Oscars, the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences has voted to rescind the sound mixing nomination for Greg P. Russell for his work on "13 Hours: The Secret Soldiers of Benghazi." The decision, announced Saturday, was due to Russell's violation of Academy campaign regulations. The statement says Russell violated strict rules applied to telephone lobbying. Academy President Cheryl Boone Isaacs said in a statement that they take "very seriously the Oscars voting process." "13 Hours" is still eligible for the award, but only for mixers Gary Summers, Jeffrey J. Haboush and Mac Ruth. At the Oscars on Sunday, the "13 Hours" crew is competing against the sound mixing team from "Arrival," "Hacksaw Ridge," "La La Land" and "Rogue One: A Star Wars Story."

Meryl Streep added as Academy Awards presenter

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Meryl Streep, whose Golden Globes speech prompted President Donald Trump to call her "overrated," has been added as a presenter to Sunday's Academy Awards. The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences on Friday unveiled its final batch of presenters, including Streep. The actress is also a nominee for a record 20th time. She's up for best actress for her performance in "Florence Foster Jenkins." In her speech at the Golden Globes last month, Streep drew a loud standing ovation for a speech that bluntly criticized Trump. She particularly voiced disgust for his mocking of The New York Times' Serge Kovaleski, a disabled reporter.

Trump says he won't attend correspondents dinner this spring

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Donald Trump, who has been criticizing the news media and is famously thin-skinned, says he won't be attending the White House Correspondents' Association dinner—sparing himself the dubious honor of being an in-the-house target of jokes. The annual fundraiser for college scholarships and venue for reporting awards mixes politicians, journalists and celebrities and is typically attended by the president and first lady. Remarks by a comedian, often roasting the president, and a humorous address by the president himself, often roasting the press and political opponents, have highlighted the event, which C-SPAN has carried live. Trump has long had an adversarial relationship with news media.

New York Times to broadcast 'truth' ad during Academy Awards

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Times will broadcast a commercial called "The Truth Is Hard" during Sunday's Academy Awards, just days after the company and other news organizations were blocked from joining an informal, on-the-record White House press briefing.

The 30-second ad includes audio from voices in the vein of news clips, talking about certain "truths," from "the truth is our nation is more divided than ever" to "the truth is the media is dishonest." It is the first television advertising from the Times since 2010 and its first brand-focused television ad in a decade.

The ad closes with: "The truth is hard. The truth is hard to find. The truth is hard to know. The truth is more important now than ever."

The clip, also posted on the Times' official YouTube page, has more than 1.5 million views since it premiered Thursday.

Its airdate on ABC during the Oscars comes two days after the Times, the Los Angeles Times, CNN and other news organizations were blocked from a White House briefing after press secretary Sean Spicer restricted the number of journalists who could attend.

The Committee to Protect Journalists condemned the move by the White House, and it marked another sign of struggle between news media and President Donald Trump.

On Friday, Trump said reporters shouldn't be allowed to use anonymous sources. He has chafed at a number of anonymously sourced stories, including numerous reports describing contacts between his campaign advisers and Russian intelligence agents, which the White House has sharply disputed.

Obama and Malia have caught a new revival of Arthur Miller's "The Price." They attended the play starring Danny DeVito, John Turturro, Tony Shalhoub and Jessica Hecht at the American Airlines Theatre on Friday, Feb. 24, 2017, in New York.

New mom returning to work wants to find right day care

DEAR ABBY: I am a new mom to a sweet baby boy. I am (or was) very career-oriented and never in a million years thought I would want to be a stay-at-home mom. I will have to return to work shortly, and I'm really struggling.

I have a hard time putting my little one in day care, but I don't have a choice. I have no idea where to begin, how to select the right day care or what questions to ask. Any assistance would be greatly appreciated.

NEW MOM IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NEW MOM: Start by talking to your friends and family, asking if they know of a day care that's good, then make sure that any facility you're considering is licensed. Spend a little time there to see how the caregivers interact with the children.

Go to babycenter.com and search on "daycare." You will find a section on day care centers that will give you the information you need. You should also check with your state's department of social services to be sure no complaints have been filed. I wish you luck in your search.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years the people closest to me (immediate family, friends and a few ex-boyfriends) have given me every reason not to trust anyone much.

About a year ago I found the courage to date again and met a man who gives me every reason to trust him to the fullest. The problem is, because of my past, I'm having problems doing it. How do I move past my issues and give the relationship I'm in a fair chance before I destroy it?

GUN-SHY IN MAINE

DEAR GUN-SHY: Considering your history, it makes sense that you are afraid of being hurt or taken advantage of. However, not all people are alike. Allow the relationship more time to develop. Don't be afraid to talk things out with him rather than react by jumping to conclusions and/or making accusations.

Listen to what he says and watch what he does. If the two don't match, regard it as a red flag. However, if they do match, then count your blessings because you may have finally found a winner.

DEAR ABBY: For years I've gone to a neighborhood bar every Friday night for a few hours during cocktail hour. I have recently started using oxygen due to COPD from smoking.

My doctor says I can do anything I feel I'm up to. Well, I'm up to going out to the bar like I used to do. Trouble is, I'm self-conscious about the carrier. It doesn't bother me to go out to stores, etc., but this does. Should I stay home, bored out of my mind, or get on with the life I used to have?

WANTS TO GET ON WITH LIFE

DEAR WANTS: Your doctor has said you can do what you want. I see nothing to be gained by sitting home alone and becoming depressed. My only concern is that the bar you frequent may be smoky and be problematic for your already-damaged lungs. If the bar is smoke-free, go. But if it isn't, then I'm suggesting you find one that is.

Your numbers are 2, 13, 18, 22, 26, 38, 43.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put the past behind you and learn to live in the moment. Don't give in to anger, revenge or worries that will pass if you are grateful for what you have. True change begins within. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get involved and be a participant. If you don't try to change your life, you cannot complain. Your voice will be heard if you are passionate about what you say and want. Join forces with like-minded people. Use intelligence instead of force. ****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Decide what you are going to do next, but don't share just yet. The element of surprise will give you the edge you need. Someone with less integrity could steal your idea or take credit for your work if you are too vocal. **

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do your best and don't worry about what others are up to. Stay focused on what you have to contribute and how you can customize or make whatever you do your own. Meetings, business trips and partnerships look inviting. *****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Prospects look good if you are diligent. Show off what you have to offer and you will attract someone who you would like to work with. Expect to face criticism from someone jealous of your talents. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Share your thoughts and ideas with people who show interest. A partnership will enable you to achieve your personal dreams. Your creative imagination, insight and astute vision of what's going on around you will bring good results. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be prepared to deal with anyone who is trying to block your path. Know what you want and don't back down. Work on making progress once you have completed your preparations. Trust in your ability to do things yourself. Celebrate your victory. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Expand your horizons and indulge in unfamiliar events that will engage your mind and prompt you to take on new challenges. Express your thoughts and utilize your skills, and you will improve your home and personal life. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep outsiders at a distance. Stay focused on home and family matters that directly concern your living arrangements and ability to make money. Emotional deception will surface if you are too revealing or open about your personal affairs. **

Bulls benefit as James sits with strep, beat Cavs, 117-99

CLEVELAND (AP)—With LeBron James missing from Quicken Loans Arena, the Cleveland Cavaliers were reminded again just how tough life can be without their star.

James stayed home with strep throat while Dwyane Wade scored 20 points and Jimmy Butler recorded a triple-double, leading the Chicago Bulls to a 117-99 victory Saturday night.

Cleveland coach Tyronn Lue said he wasn't sure how long the Cavaliers would be without the four-time MVP. Cleveland struggled as it often does without James - they are 4-19 without him since he returned to Cleveland in 2014, including 0-4 this season.

Forward Tristan Thompson knows opposing teams won't feel sorry for the Cavaliers when James isn't on the court.

"It's a long season," he said. "Guys are going to be out. Guys are going to be hurt. Guys are going to be sick. It's part of the game of basketball. Whether it's LeBron or whoever it might be, we have to be ready to play."

Chicago has won all three games against Cleveland this season. It took advantage of James' absence to win its fourth straight overall.

Wade was 9 of 18 from the field and had 10 assists with eight rebounds. Butler had 18 points, including 13 in the third quarter, to go along with 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

"Of course, I wanted to play against LeBron," said Wade, a longtime friend of James. "But once we knew he wasn't playing, we had to put that to the back of our mind and focus on playing a team with Kyrie Irving."

Irving led Cleveland with 34 points, hitting 13 of 25 from the field. Kyle Korver scored 14 points before limping to the locker room after landing awkwardly on his right leg late in the fourth quarter.

Butler didn't score until hitting a 3-pointer late in the second quarter. The game was tied nine times and featured 10 lead changes in the first half. The Bulls pulled away from a 65-all tie midway through the third quarter and used an 11-0 run to gain control.

The Cavaliers have lost seven straight without James, dating to March 16 of last season when they beat Dallas.

James remained home for Saturday morning's shoot-around, and Lue announced about 90 minutes before tip-off that he wouldn't play. Lue confirmed James had strep throat after the game. James is averaging 25.7 points per game.

Chicago had seven players in double figures. Rajon Rondo scored 15 points and Nikola Mirotic added 14.

James Jones scored 14 points for the Cavaliers, also playing without the injured Kevin Love and J.R. Smith. It appeared Korver might join the list when he walked gingerly to the locker room, but he said tests after the game showed no structural damage.

"I'm feeling fortunate," he said. "I feel like it could have been a lot worse. It was really scary. I landed kind of short-legged. You've seen a lot of bad injuries when that happens, but I think I'm going to be OK."

Heat 113, Pacers 95

In Miami, Hassan Whiteside scored 22 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, Dion Waiters added 22 points and red-hot Miami pulled away in the fourth quarter to beat Indiana.

Goran Dragic added 21 points and James Johnson had 15 for Miami, which outscored Indiana 30-16 in the fourth. The Pacers played most of the second half without All-Star forward Paul George, who was ejected after getting two technicals on separate plays early in the third quarter.

Myles Turner scored 18 points and Jeff Teague added 16 for Indiana. George had 10 points in 19 minutes.

It was the 16th win in the

Cleveland Cavaliers' Kyle Korver, left, fouls Chicago Bulls' Dwyane Wade, right, in the first half of an NBA basketball game, Saturday, Feb. 25, 2017, in Cleveland.

The Pelicans fell to 0-2 since trading for DeMarcus Cousins and pairing him with Anthony Davis.

Davis had 39 points and 14 rebounds but scored only 12 in the second half. Cousins finished with 12 points and 15 rebounds.

Seth Curry scored 10 of his 13 in the fourth quarter to help Dallas pull away. His 3-pointer with 4:49 to play gave the Mavericks an 84-72 lead, and the Pelicans never got closer than six after that.

Warriors 112, Nets 95

In Oakland, California, Stephen Curry scored 27 points on a night Kevin Durant missed his first game of the season with a hand injury, and Golden State beat Brooklyn to clinch a playoff berth.

Klay Thompson added 24 points. Curry converted a four-point play just before halftime to put his team up 62-51 at the break. The two-time reigning MVP had five 3-pointers and five assists.

This is just a first step for these star-studded, NBA-best Warriors (49-9): They want the No. 1 seed in the West. Oh, and a championship.

Durant sat out with a bruised left hand. He injured his pinkie in the first quarter of a 123-113 win over the Los Angeles Clippers on Thursday night, and X-rays were negative. He practiced Friday with his left hand heavily taped and still had some discomfort Saturday.

Rondae Hollis-Jefferson scored 16 points in the Nets' 16th straight defeat.

Rockets 142, Timberwolves 130

In Houston, James Harden had 24 points and 10 assists to lead Houston to a victory over Minnesota as both teams set season scoring highs.

Houston won for the sixth time in seven games, handing the Timberwolves their first road loss in more than three weeks.

Minnesota committed a season-high 25 turnovers that led to 38 points for the Rockets.

Playing against Houston's guard-heavy rotation, Minnesota went inside all night and outscored the Rockets 68-44 in the paint. Karl-Anthony Towns had 37 points and 22 rebounds, and Andrewiggins added 30 points.

Still, the Timberwolves were ultimately outpaced by the hot-shooting Rockets.

Charles Barkley drops curse word on 'Inside the NBA'

ATLANTA (AP)—Charles Barkley accidentally used a curse word on-air when describing the New York Knicks' play on TNT's "Inside the NBA."

During highlights of the Cavaliers' 119-104 win over New York in Cleveland on Thursday, Barkley used a synonym for excrement in reference to the Knicks.

Host Ernie Johnson immediately chided Barkley, who repeatedly apologized. Fellow analyst Shaquille O'Neal joked that he'd pay any fine from the Federal Communications Commission.

TNT's cameras also caught Barkley's shocked reaction after saying the word. He covered his mouth before laughing off the slip of tongue.

last 18 games for the surging Heat, who moved within 1 1/2 games of idle Detroit for the No. 8 spot in the Eastern Conference. Miami also topped 100 points for the 16th consecutive game, extending the franchise record.

Knicks 110, 76ers 109

The Knicks blew a 17-point lead and fell behind by one when Jahlil Okafor scored with 9 seconds remaining. But Anthony dribbled left after a timeout, pulling up over Robert Covington to cap his 37-point performance.

The Knicks then intercepted the 76ers' inbound pass to hold on and snap their two-game losing streak.

Derrick Rose added 18 points and Justin Holiday had 14 for the Knicks, who won for just the third time in 11 games. They played without starters Kristaps Porzingis (sprained right ankle) and Joakim Noah (sore left hamstring).

Okafor had a season-high 28 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as the 76ers nearly pulled out the victory after beating Washington on Friday. Dario Saric had 19 points and 15 rebounds, and Covington finished with 20 points and 10 boards.

Magic 105, Hawks 86

In Orlando, Florida, Terrence Ross scored 24 points, Nikola Vucevic had 16 points and 14 rebounds and Orlando beat Atlanta to snap a two-game skid.

Ross played his second game with Orlando after coming over from Toronto in a trade for Serge Ibaka and gave Orlando the shooting touch it has lacked all season. He hit 10 of 15 from the field, including 4 of 7 from 3-point range.

Orlando also got double-digit production from Aaron Gordon (18 points) and Elfrid Payton (15). Payton was just short for his fourth career triple-double with nine rebounds and nine assists despite not playing at all in the fourth quarter.

Tim Hardaway Jr. led five Hawks in double figures with 15 points. Atlanta was playing the back-end of a back-to-back and dropped its third straight. The Hawks are trying to remain in the top five in the Eastern Conference.

Hornets 99, Kings 85

In Sacramento, California, Frank Kaminsky had 23 points and 13 rebounds and Charlotte beat Sacramento to end a five-game losing streak.

The Hornets went ahead late in the first quarter and led the rest of the way for their second win in 14 games. The Kings never got going offensively, and Charlotte led by 23 points in the second half while ending their 12-game road skid.

Marvin Williams scored 16 points and Nicolas Batum had 15 for the Hornets.

Ben McLemore led the Kings with 18 points and Buddy Hield had 15 in his second game since being acquired from New Orleans in a trade for DeMarcus Cousins. Anthony Tolliver and Tyreke Evans had 11 points each.

Mavericks 96, Pelicans 83

In Dallas, Harrison Barnes scored 19 points and Dirk Nowitzki had 18 points and nine rebounds as Dallas ended a three-game losing streak by beating New Orleans.

Catcher Matt Wieters joins Washington Nationals

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Matt

Wieters finally has a new team. One crazy accident turned his free agency into a harrowing experience.

Wieters cut his left wrist when a five-gallon glass water container broke in his garage on Nov. 1, delaying his off-season preparation—and, he thinks, his chance to find a deal.

“It’s tough finding a team when you can’t do anything baseball-related,” Wieters said Friday, when the catcher took batting practice and ran conditioning sprints at spring training with the Washington Nationals after his signing was announced. “They told me I was very lucky that it wasn’t worse than it was.”

Wieters agreed to a $21 million, two-year deal worth $10.5 million annually, one that gives him the right to terminate the agreement after this season and become a free agent again. It includes $2.5 million each year in deferred salary.

Now Wieters is working on getting up to speed with the pitching staff for the reigning NL East champions. The Nationals’ first exhibition game is Saturday against the New York Mets.

“There’s definitely enough time,” Wieters said. “As a catcher, I’d love to have as much as possible. Being able to listen (to the pitchers) and how they pitch will help me out a lot.”

He joins a crowded clubhouse of catchers. Jose Lobaton and Pedro Severino played in Washington last season, and the club traded for San Diego’s Derek Norris. In all, there are six catchers on the 40-man roster.

General manager Mike Rizzo described Wieters as “a leader in the clubhouse and on the field” for the Baltimore Orioles, the only major league club the four-time All-Star has played for until now.

STICKING AROUND

The Chicago Cubs and reliever Pedro Strop agreed to a contract adding $6.35 million in guaranteed money through 2018, a deal that includes a club option for 2019.

Strop agreed earlier this month to a $5.5 million, one-year contract. The new deal calls for a $5.85 million salary in 2018 and a $6.25 million club option for 2019 with a $500,000 buyout. If the option is exercised, he could make $750,000 in performance bonuses in 2019: $250,000 each for 45, 50 and 55 games finished.

Strop went 2-2 with a 2.85 ERA in 54 appearances last year, helping Chicago win the World Series for the first time since 1908. Strop, known for wearing his hat off to the side, and ace right-hander Jake Arrieta were acquired in the same July 2013 trade with Baltimore.

AILING

Dilson Herrera has inflammation in his right shoulder and will not throw for a couple days, taking the Colombian infielder out of the World Baseball Classic and hurting his chances for making the Cincinnati Reds.

Herrera, who turns 23 next Friday, also experienced shoulder soreness for parts of last season, including during spring training. He said it started bothering him again about a week ago.

The Reds acquired Herrera when they traded Jay Bruce to the New York Mets last summer.

“I’m OK. Sometimes we’ve got to be strong, get the mind right so we’re ready for everything, so I feel normal,” Herrera said in Goodyear, Arizona.

Reds manager Bryan Price said Herrera probably won’t throw again until Monday or Tuesday.

“He’ll DH tomorrow. He’s fine to hit,” Price said Friday. “But he’s not OK to defend and throw. Until we have that, his shoulder feeling good coming off the end of last year where he had the soreness, it doesn’t make any sense at all to be playing defense in the WBC or for us.”

Cubs closer Wade Davis reunited with manager Joe Maddon

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—Wade Davis was a promising starting pitcher when he made his major league debut for Joe Maddon and the Tampa Bay Rays almost eight years ago. Then he was a reliever, and then a starter again and then a reliever.

Now he gets the ball from Maddon once again—only this time as the closer for the Chicago Cubs.

Much has changed for Davis over the years, and not much at the same time.

“The only way he’s changed is he is a relief pitcher,” a chuckling Maddon said. “He was a starter when I first met him. He’s the same cat. He’s very deliberate in his methods and even conversationally.”

That’s just fine with Maddon, who is hoping for more of the same from Davis after a dominant run with Kansas City. While the Dodgers, Giants and Yankees spent big money on closers over the winter, the World Series champions acquired Davis in a trade with the Royals for outfielder Jorge Soler.

So far, the transition looks like one of Davis’ relief appearances: smooth and efficient.

“It’s been pretty easy,” said

Davis, who will make $10 million this season in the final year of his contract. “Everybody’s been really easy to get along with and get to know and the staff has been really good, so it’s been easy to get acclimated to all the stuff.”

Davis, a third-round pick in the 2004 draft, was a starter for his first three seasons in Tampa Bay. The Rays used him as a reliever in 2012, and he went 3-0 with a 2.43 ERA in 54 appearances.

But that was his final year with the Rays, who traded the 6-foot-5 right-hander to Kansas City. The Royals put Davis back in the rotation before returning him to the bullpen late in the 2013 season.

Smart move.

Davis, Kelvin Herrera and Greg Holland combined for an overwhelming relief presence as Kansas City made consecutive World Series appearances, winning it all with Davis on the mound in 2015. Davis went 19-4 with 47 saves and 1.18 ERA over his final three seasons with the Royals.

“He’s got about three plus-pitches in his fastball, his cutter and his curveball,” Cleveland second baseman

AP
This is a 2017 file photo showing Chicago Cubs’ Wade Davis. Wade Davis was a promising starting pitcher when he made his major league debut for Joe Maddon and the Tampa Bay Rays almost eight years ago.

Jason Kipnis said. “He’s that guy. And it’s a down angle because he’s coming from a tall slot. He’s a competitor. It’s weird. He’s a great mix between never giving in and coming straight at you. He’s not going to walk you. ... His ability to literally live on the outer black of the plate makes it very hard to get any good swings off him.”

Davis uses his starter’s repertoire to his advantage in the bullpen. He also gained confidence through his experience in multiple roles.

“I think it helps your mind, knowing that no matter what the situation is, you know, if that’s what you’re asked to do, that’s what you’ve got to do and you’ve done it before,” he said. “So it’s not new to you.”

The 31-year-old Davis went 2-1 with a 1.87 ERA and 27 saves last season, but he was limited to 43 1/3 innings because of a forearm injury. The Cubs sent one of their trainers to examine him before the trade with the Royals was completed in December. They also signed Koji Uehara to a $6 million, one-year contract.

With Hector Rondon also in the fold, the Cubs have some options should Davis experience any health issues. But Davis said he feels good.

“Everything has gone really smoothly (in) spring training,” he said. “Bullpens been really good, progressing well, so I think those are all good things.”

Davis came back to pitch for Kansas City in September, going 1-0 with six saves and a 1.04 ERA in his final nine appearances. The Royals also missed the playoffs for the first time since 2013, giving Davis more time to train.

“I think you make adjustments every year,” he said. “Your body changes every year just in general. ... Took advantage of the extra month that I had this winter and got back to where I wanted to be strength-wise and confidence-wise physically, so that’s a big deal.”

United Airlines Guam Marathon announces exciting additions

TUMON, Guam—Guam Sports Events Inc. (GSE), along with title sponsor United Airlines and gold sponsors the Guam Visitors Bureau and Pacific Islands Club, announced at last Thursday’s press conference exciting additions to the United Airlines Guam Marathon. Sam Shinohara, United’s managing director of Operations Asia/Pacific, and Nathan Denight, president and CEO of the Guam Visitors Bureau, joined GSE managing director Ben Ferguson to discuss event updates and benefits for Guam.

The 5th Annual United Airlines Guam Marathon offers 5K, 10K, Half Marathon and Full Marathon races on April 9. Organizers said $3 from every registration will go toward the Guam Fire Department, Guam Police Department, Islandwide Beautification Task Force, Tourism Education Council, and USO Guam.

“We are thrilled to support these five event beneficiaries on behalf of participants of the United Airlines Guam Marathon,” Ferguson said. “We are working hard to ensure that participants and the community can enjoy and be proud of this event. We want everyone to have a Håfa Adai experience to remember.”

Registered participants can enjoy Eat.Shop.Run., a new runners perks program from April 3 to 16. Runners can redeem special offers at popular restaurants and stores by providing proof of registration.

The running event features three days filled with festivities. On April 7 and 8, the Håfa Adai Expo will serve as the festive location where participants can pick up packets. The expo will be open not only to participants but also to the public. The expo will feature food and beverage concessions, live entertainment, vendors and a running clinic by Olympic gold medalist and international race ambassador Naoko Takahashi.

Event organizers are bringing back popular traditions, such as the post-race Tumon Bay Dip. After crossing the finish line, runners can take off their shoes and dip their feet into Tumon Bay.

The new post-race BBQ Beach Party will take place at the Gov. Joseph A. Flores Memorial Park (Ypao Beach). Participants and the public can enjoy free food, drinks, and live entertainment.

“The Håfa Adai Expo and BBQ Beach Party are open to local residents because we appreciate the community’s support in hosting an international event of this caliber and scale,” Denight said. “The United Airlines Guam Marathon is making strides in boosting tourism, which helps make Guam a better place to live, work and visit.”

The United Airlines Guam Marathon, in its fifth year, is organized by Guam Sports Events Inc., a nonprofit organization that hosts annual running and cycling events to promote Guam’s Hafa Adai spirit to grow sports tourism on Guam.

Guam’s first IAAF approved marathon race will take place on Sunday, April 9, 2017. Considered Guam’s premier running event, the UGM includes 5K, 10K, half marathon (13.1 miles) and marathon (26.2 miles) race distances. All courses have been officially certified by the IAAF (International Association of Athletic Federations) and AIMS (Association of International Marathons and Distance Races). This designation means that marathon runners may use this as a qualifying event for the Boston Marathon. Complete event details and registration can be found on the official event website at unitedguammarathon.com. The UGM is also sponsored by the Guam Visitors Bureau and the Pacific Islands Club. (PR) route to the finals after topping the Blue Dragons, 25-19, 25-18. The Blue Dragons earned the right to face Set It & 4Get It for the second and last finals berth after booting out the Ol’Aces, 25-23, 20-25, 19-17.

Meanwhile, in the women’s division finals, the Goal Diggers survived a tough challenge from All Stars 1/2 in the extended first set, 27-25, before completing the sweep in the second, 25-18. Iszel Moralejo Esteves, Shawn Davis, Michelle Masga, Krystel Maluyo, Cecille Guevarra, and R.J. Laguilles played for the champion team.

The Goal Diggers marched into the title game after eliminating Team Lapta, 25-11, 25-16,

The final qualifier will also be held in India in April with Lee and company joining New Zealand, Australia, Sri Lanka, and 12 other countries from Asia in the battle for the three slots to the world competition. “I’m going back to Fiji to train until the main qualifying comes again in India. There will be a lot more good players there so and I’m excited to play against them,” said Lee, who will be playing in the final qualifier for the second straight year.

Meanwhile, in the Junior Davis Cup pre-qualifier, the Philippines won over Singapore, while Lebanon and Vietnam completed the Top 4. The CNMI’s Robbie Schorr and his teammates Clement Mainguy of Vanuatu and Jeremy Guines of Tahiti topped their pool (battle for No. 9 to 14 finishers) after prevailing against Tajikistan, Sri Lanka, and Bangladesh.

Saipan’s total runs in the first inning, while Jesus Tyquengco and Jequinn Lizama had a two-RBI single and two-RBI double, respectively.

Aguon and company went on to keep its distance against the Twins after collecting nine more runs in the next three innings. Aguon finished with four runs on a 2-for-4 performance at the plate and contributed one RBI, while Jon Reyes and Tyquengco had three RBIs each. Jequinn and Isidro Lizama and Ezra Ada added three runs apiece.

Pirates-2 10, Ol’Aces 0

The Pirates 2 won its season-debut game after shutting down the Ol’Aces in the curtain-raiser.

G-Boy Pangelinan threw a three-hitter to lift the Pirates-2 to victory an inning earlier. He also had 11 strikeouts in a no relief job. With him on the mound and his teammates also holding their ground on defense, the Ol’Aces made it to us far as third base only once.

Kazu Dela Cruz registered three runs and one RBI for the Pirates-2, while Deondry Cruz, D.J. Pangelinan, and J.R. Suel chipped in two runs each.

Braves 17, Pirates 1 2

The Braves also cruised to victory in the second game last Saturday.

A 13-run bottom of the first inning set up the Braves’ second victory in as many games as they finished off the Pirates 1 after only three and a half innings.

Joel Borja led the Braves’ hot start as he went 2-for-2 just in the first inning, scored two runs, and had two RBIs. He had a single in his first trip at bat and made it home on a passed ball, while he drilled a two-RBI double in his second at bat and was driven home by Heath Camacho’s single. Four players in the Braves’ top of the order reached home plate twice in the first inning for an early double-digit lead, 13-0.

The Braves added four more runs in the second inning to widen the gap before the Pirates 1 ended its silence at the top of the third inning, thanks to Easton Dela Cruz’s RBI single. The Pirates 1 got its other run also in the third inning, but the team was done at the top of the fourth when Braves pitcher Angelo Igitol struck out two batters and a Pirates 1 runner was earlier beaten to second base.

The CNMI's Carol Lee showed poise in her toughest singles match in the 2017 Junior Fed Cup Asia Oceania Pre-Qualifying Zone to lift Pacific Oceania to the title win against Sri Lanka last Saturday at the R.K Khanna Tennis Stadium in New Delhi, India.

Lee eked out a 7-6 (5) victory over Anika Seneviratne in the first set of Singles 1 play and the Commonwealth play-er rode on the momentum of her close win in the second to ease past her Sri Lankan opponent, 6-2. Lee's triumph sealed

Bank of Saipan gained enough cushion in the first inning en route to a 22-17 victory over the Twins in their Major division game in the 2017 Saipan Little League Baseball last Saturday at the Miguel "Tan Ge" Basa Pangelinan Ballfield.

Bank of Saipan scored 10 runs at the top of the opening inning to take early control of the match and hung in there to get its second win in as many game. Bank of Saipan posted its first victory during the opening week of the league against the Pirates 1, 9-8, off Anton Agui- on's RBI single at the bottom of the sixth and last inning.

the deal for Pacific Oceania, as Tahiti's Naia Guitton earlier posted a similar hard-earned win over Savini Jayasuriya in the Singles 2 match, 7-5, 6-3. Had the 15-year-old Lee dropped her singles game, she and Guitton would have been forced to play in the deciding doubles match over Seneviratne and Sathi Siyara Silva Mirissage just a few hours after the second singles tiff.

The match against Seneviratne was Lee's longest as it finished after nearly two hours (1:42). It was also Lee's first singles match that went over an hour and the Sri Lankan top singles player was the first to score three points against the CNMI bet.

Ball Crushers, Goal Diggers rule v-ball tourney

By ROSELYN B. MONROYO

REPORTER

The Ball Crushers and Goal Diggers recorded contrasting wins to top their respective divisions in the 2017 VolleyTime Tournament held last week at the Gilbert C. Ada Gymnasium.

The Ball Crushers reigned supreme in the men's division after slipping past Set It & 4Get It in a three-set title game last Friday. Set It & 4Get It stunned the then unbeaten Ball Crushers in the opening set of the winner-take-all finale, 25-22, to boost its chances for an upset. However, the Ball Crushers, who had Jonas Barcinas, John Nekaifes, Riel Mercado, Alfredo Gueverra, Macoi Aguda, Bryan Valenton, Jeff Riman, and John Legacion in its roster, regrouped in the second set and earned a 25-18 victory to extend the championship game.

In the deciding third set, the opposing teams went back and forth before the Ball Crushers gained the advantage in the late stage and escaped the upset axe of Set It & 4Get It with a 15-11 triumph.

The title win was Ball Crushers' fourth victory in the single-elimination tournament. The eventual champion swept Pool A, beating the Blue Dragons, Set It & 4Get It, and Danny's Bad Boyz to advance to the semifinals.

In the Final Four, the Ball Crushers needed only two sets to knock off the Aces, 25-16, 25-21. The Aces moved into
